Praise for the Book

“America has a hidden history, but fortunately for us, archaeologist Kenneth Feder knows where it's hiding. He's been there and back again, and in this wonderfully entertaining guidebook he shares his personal recommendations for the top fifty ancient American sites you should see before you die. Pick any ten of these sites to visit and, with Feder as your guide, your views of America's ancient past will be transformed.”

— Brad Lepper, Ohio History Connection

“Ancient America is a unique gazetteer and guide to fifty major archaeological sites in North America. Feder provides engaging descriptions and wise guidance, as well as his own journal entries when visiting the sites. Both students and general readers could not wish for a better companion.”

— Brian Fagan, University of California Santa Barbara, author of *Ancient North America

“The magnificent archaeological sites left by America's native peoples are wondrous enough without the myths and exaggerations that often contaminate popular discussions about them. There is no one better than archaeologist and writer Kenneth Feder at debunking the misconceptions and stereotypes, and then showing in reader-friendly prose what's real and true.”

— Kendrick Frazier, editor of Skeptical Inquirer, author of *People of Chaco: A Canyon and Its Culture
